WHY CAN'T WOMEN TRAVEL LIGHT?

COVER STORY

Hit the road, Jane!

What kind of traveller are you? • What're you packing in?
Travelling with a weather girl • Are you an international headliner?

Ankeeta Jain smiles, "Shopping is always a back-up plan and a fun one. I don't know if I travel light as I haven't thought about that, but I know I travel smart. I carry a pair of extra clothes, but I limit footwear. I stick to the basics and travel essentials — enough to keep me pampered. The rest can be done without." She also adds, "Plus, when I'm travelling alone and carrying my luggage myself, it's easier if my bags aren't heavier than me."

SPEAK EASY!
If we do a quick run-through of what we women regard as essentials, we'd find clothes, from denims to the little black dress; shoes, from Osho chappals to the hot red pumps; makeup, the whole darn kit; nail-care products (we can't have chipped nail paint or, worse, chipped nails on a holiday), razor (never know when you'll need it), sunscreen, moisturisers, face cleansers, cotton wool, scarves, hats, sunglasses, watches... Phew! The bag's heavy already!

Bottomline: We women are made to be pampered and to look our prettiest at all times. And travelling light would most certainly deprive us of our birthright. So ladies, don't fret over it. Pack in all you want—if your man has a problem, well, he can deal with it. ■
